Cover & Rossiter, a CPA and Advisory Firm in Wilmington, DE, was relocating to a new space. They were eager to create a fresh environment that would not only excite their current staff but would attract future team members. They worked with design firm, Donnelly Banks and HON dealer, GA Blanco & Sons, for their new look.

Lindsay Wheeler of Cover & Rossiter said, “We needed a space that would show our clients how we can serve them, as we’ve been telling them. We are heading in the direction of a ‘future ready firm’. This space embodies that idea. We have the latest technology with our software and systems, and now we have the latest furniture to accompany that.”

New updates included HON sit-to-stand desks, lounge seating to promote a collaborative work environment, and a multifunctional kitchen that can be used for events and meetings in addition to the normal use.

“Our trip to the HON Showroom in Washington, D.C. was a really helpful experience,” said Wheeler. “Being able to physically sit in a space to get a feel for size and functionality was extremely important in our decision to go with the cube size which was selected. It was really helpful to see and feel the different colors and textures that HON offers as well.”

Affordability was also important in the decision-making process. HON dealer, John Hughes of GA Blanco, said of the project, “There was obviously a budget to consider and HON provided the aesthetic pop that is part of the 21st century rebranding -- while also being cost-effective. HON is set apart from others by breadth of line and middle market pricing.”
